CITY INTELLIGENCE

SUDDEN DEATH OF A YOUNG PHILADELPHIA JOURNALIST.—We are called upon to publish the sad announcement of the demise of Mr. George Collier Bower, a distinguished young journalist of this city. Mr. Bower died suddenly this morning, of heart disease, at the residence of his father, northeast corner of Sixth and Vine streets. Mr. Bower had not yet reached the prime of manhood; he was yet a single man, and in the vigor of his manly life. He combined rare qualities of intellect with the sweetest of dispositions. His nature was entirely free from guile, and his innocence of thought and habit, speech and action, were really childlike. George Collier Bower was a native of Philadelphia; he received a common school education, and entered into the study of pharmacy with his father early in life. He made rapid progress in this important science, but his comprehensive mind was attracted to other studies, and soon became one of our most prolific phonographic reporters. Seven years ago he commenced his journalistic life as reporter for political canvasses. His worth soon became apparent, and he attached to the "Evening Bulletin," where he at once took rank as a facile and accomplished writer. Later he was engaged on the Philadelphia Inquirer, and at that paper achieved his most notable successes. Soon after he was connected with the Rebellion. Mr. Bower was sent to the front as the principal special war correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and his letters from the Army of the Potomac gave their author a proud name for a pleasant and truthful style. His letters were always looked for with anxious anticipation, and read with satisfaction. The writer of this unworthy notice met Mr. Bower on many a bloody field of battle, and always found him for in the front, with note-book in hand, gathering up the details of the passing events amidst the fury of battle he was utterly devoid of fear. A more intrepid and noble warlike nature could not have been found in the ranks than that possessed by the lamented young subject of our sketch. In one of the fiercest conflicts near Richmond, while springing his steed into the very flame of the enemy's musketry, he was severely wounded, and General Heintzelman urged him to retire, but the brave boy pushed on, holding himself up, as he said, "by grit, by his God, and by the blood of his country." He was killed, and a list of the casualties for the next day's fighting.

Mr. Bower was a particular friend of Hon. H. J. Raymond, and served as a special war correspondent of the New York Times, with that accorded to him by the late Editor of that paper. After serving in his journalistic capacity throughout all the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac, Mr. Bower returned to his home in Philadelphia, and his services were at once secured as local editor of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, in which position he served faithfully and ably until his falling fever forced him to relinquish his favorite profession. During the past six or eight months he has suffered severely at times with the disease which caused his death.

We have only space to add that Mr. Bower was a true Christian; full of filial, fraternal, and humane affections; an honest man and a trusty friend.

He was one of the oldest members of the Press Club of Philadelphia, and was elected the first Secretary of that organization. A special meeting of the Club has been called to do honor to the memory of the deceased.

PATENT MAGIC POWDER.—This new and useful article is very aptly named, for its effects on metallic substances in the way of removing rust, and producing a brilliancy equal to new, are really magical. It is a positive boon to the household, and every house should be supplied with it.

FIRE-PROOF SAFES.—The reputation of Evans & Watson's Safes is growing every day. They are secure, salubrious, upon which the flames seem to have little effect. Their ability to resist the action of heat is perfectly wonderful.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S VISIT.—The President is going to spend the summer at Long Branch. He has engaged rooms at the Continental Hotel, Long Branch, N. J., where he will stay during his visit.
